Saki's Cats rounds up the tales about cats, big and small, by the undisputed master of the short story.

'Tobermory', one of Saki's most famous pieces, demonstrates the danger that would ensue from granting cats the power of speech – animals have long lurked unseen, eavesdropping, in the background. The tom in 'The Philanthropist and the Happy Cat' is the only one to enjoy his meal. In 'The Penance' and 'Mrs Packetide's Tiger', hunters who put cats in their sights are humiliated and blackmailed. 'The Achievement of the Cat' considers how cats have come to be served by the human race.

The feisty felines of these tales are the only clear winners, and, with a characteristic smirk and dash of his pen, it is Edwardian Society that Saki sends slinking off, tail between its legs.

'His stories and novels appear as delightful and [...] sophisticated as they did when he first published them.'

NOËL COWARD

ABOUT THE AUTHOR:

Hector Hugh Munro (1870–1916), known by his nom de plume, Saki, whose humorous writings are amongst the best known in the English literary canon, is widely considered to be a master of the short-story genre. Although he also wrote longer works of fiction, they are not nearly as popular as his short stories, which still enjoy a widespread readership. Saki also wrote extensively for the Westminster Gazette, where he published political sketches such as the Westminster Alice series.
