

ALL TEN MARILYNS

AND OTHER STORIES

STUART HENSON

- The debut short-story collection from an acclaimed poet.
- A wide-ranging collection of stories dealing with sometimes comedic, sometimes poignant topics with lightness and compassion.
- An attractively produced volume that sits well in current cover trends and well represents the title story's central image.
- Publication follows renewed interest in the short-story format, amongst Renard's bestselling contemporary titles.

ISBN: 978-1-80447-244-6
Paperback • 208pp • £10
THEMA: FYB, FXR 129 x 198 mm
WORLD ENGLISH RIGHTS
29TH APRIL 2027

In All Ten Marilyns and Other Stories some of life's odder surprises are in store for a broad cast of the wayward, the travelling, the reclusive and the offbeat, who are thrust together, shoulders rubbing across the ages…

A commuter struggles to understand the puzzling calls he's getting as he travels home by train; a photographer discovers a lost batch of photographs he once took in a magazine in a dentist's waiting room; a couple who like role-playing at wartime-themed weekends begin to blur the lines between fantasy and reality.

Jostling subjects comedic and dark, All Ten Marilyns is a compelling debut collection from an accomplished writer. Often playful, sometimes ironic, but always sympathetic to human frailty, these are tales that shall never be forgot.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR:

Stuart Henson is a poet, author and playwright. He has written seven poetry collections and three pamphlets, including The Way You Know It and Beautiful Monsters. He has been shortlisted for the Michael Marks Environmental Poet of the Year and won an Eric Gregory Award. His short stories have been published in various magazines including The Blue Nib, Stand and Under the Radar, and his first short-story collection, All Ten Marilyns and Other Stories, is published by Hay Press. He lives in Cambridgeshire.